Honokong, January 14th, 1875.

WE publish in our columns this morning a letter addressed to the Hon. J. GARDINER Austin, the Colonial Secretary, upon the Victoria Registration Ordinance, 1874. When the Draft of this Ordinance was first clauses, and maintained that it was a crude and ill-digested measure, and calculated not object sought after, but also likely to be prolength, exposed the weaknesses and faults of the Bill. With as little reiteration of first objections to this measure as possible, we the writer has exposed which were not then dwelt on. Prefatorily, it should be said "had they fully understood its probable Legislation of this kind frequently misses its mark, either through the ambiguity of its such a character; if it became law it would in his private and public capacities unite in speedily prove to be unworkable. And unless there is some prospect of a Bill fulfilling the object it was designed for, the sooner it is consigned to oblivion the better. This measure has been framed, it is to be pre- Tuesday:sumed, with a view to prevent fraud by making the registration of all the partners of business compulsory.' Like Mr. HAYLLAR, we too object to the penal aspect of the bill; but putting that aside, for the moment.

bly far the largest, of the Chinese retail shops, sonse, at least, that the capital is subscribed of sorrowful pride when I find my fellow enying Farewell, and following you with all by a great number of people, and the business is carried on by a manager, who is also under the difficult circumstances in which usually a partner. Now it is more than likely that, as these petty capitalists would not feel inclined to make themselves liable mander. I could not have left the doomed for more than they originally invested, they would in many cases resort to subterfuge to conceal their names, or substitute others for covered. On behalf of the officers and crow of them. At all events, the Bill would not as an incentive to deceit. Not only would it be found to act in the way we have indicated. but it would be utterly-impracticable and inefficient, owing to the endless and incesoccurring in the composition of Chinese firms. Surely it-is-the acme of folly to uttempt to apply English ideas to Chinese practices. Mr. HAYLLAR shows very plainly that the new Ordinance would raise difficulties from its application to the law of partnership. partners are especially tronchant. He points as the same person, out distinctly enough the great injustice that would be perpetrated by the "incautious registration under compulsion of persons occupying such positions." According to Chinot mean to become partners in our accep-"held to have incurred any such liability as our law imposes." It will be apparent, then, to any practical mind, that no measure of the sort ought to be devised without special reference to, and study of, the trade customs of the Chinese. Another objection pointed out is worthy of attention. Most of us are aware how readily some of the policemen and other of the lower Government employés avail themselves of opportunities for extortion, and the Bill will infallibly give them too many such. And, again, the poorer class of tradesmen would be the chief sufforers; as, through ignorance or poverty, they would frequently neglect to register.

We referred at some length, on a former hands of the Chinese at Canton and other parts of China by the passing of this Bill. Every firm which had a partner resident in Chinamight be mercilessly squeezed by the manforeign exactions. It is none the less so that no slight degree involved in the matter. Any enactment that strikes a blow at the trade or the interests of the commercial community be hoped the Registration Ordinance will not be persevered with. Very truly does Mr. HAYLLAR observe: "No statute can form a substitute for business prudence and foresight on the one side, or on the other do much that is effectual to stem the current of fraudulent ingenuity." It is wise to well alone: better far to "bear the ills we have than fly to others that we know not of." The real need of such a law has not yet been made out. And, in the meantime, much ought to be left to the discretion of the judge in cases where Chinese are concerned, and no too HALL& HOLTZ and Kelly rigid enactment can be expected to operate fairly or well: The evils complained of by and gentlemen,-I do not intend to detain you wrong to effect a little right. Fiat justitia, ruat calum.

IMPERIAL QUARTO. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. TAOR comprehensiveness and practical service

this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not secured the Services of a skilled English Pastry. previously attained, and dispensing with those previously attained. heretofore characterized Chinese publications. LANE, CRAWFORD AND To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Ohalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Ohiness characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst HONGKONG, SHANGHAI, AND JAPAN, this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the and forwarded to Calcutta by the BARLIEST student of this difficult language absolutely re- opportunity. quires examples to dieplay the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as 1. PORT for the year 1873. Price $10. many as any other Dictionary hisherto pub-

Therefore they are continually chronicled, but pretty speeches lack the same pungency, and are passed by as insigid; yet I think there is a fine savour about one or two that I remember-that said by George the Fourth to the dilicer of marines, for example. It may be familiar to you, but will really hear repetition. There was an empty bottle on the table, and the king told the servant to "take away that marine." A guest sitting next the king whispered in his ear that an officer present belonged to that branch of the service. the extent of £15,000 on Adjoining Risks at George the Fourth ascertained his name and then, addressing him aloud, asked if he knew why an empty bottle was called a marine. "No, your majesty," replied the officer. "Because," said the king, "it has done its duty, and is ready to do it again." Which was as next a way of getting out of a rather awkward phrase as one can well imagine. Ladies, however, are the fair and proper re- POLICIES AGAINST FIRE to the cipients of pretty speeches, and a man who gets extent of 45,000 Dollars on Buildings or on them is a sort of poscher. The Due de Nivernois made an ingenious one to Madame du Barri, who was endeavouring to persuade him to withdraw his opposition to some measure she had set her beart on. "It is of no use, Monsieur-le Duc," she said, "you are only injuring your influence, for the king has made up kie mind, and I have myself heard him say that he will never change." . "Ah, madame, he was looking at you," replied the duke. Could any but a Frenchman have ever conveyed determined resistance in so polite a form? There was an ingenious amount of devotion implied in the remark of a love-sick. millionaire, when the object of his affections became ecstatic over the beauty of the evening star. "Oh, do not, do not praise it like that!" he cried, "I cannot get it for you." It is no wonder that Tom Moore was such a general favourite, if he often said such charming little things as he wrote. I think the very prettiest, quaintest quip ever penned is in one of his love songs. The lover caunct deny that he has paid homage to others before he saw the present object of his affec-

Irishmen generally do manage to say prettier things than others can. They have a certain confidence or assurance which enables them to blurt out whatever comes uppermost in their minds; that is why they make bulls. A man who is always shooting must miss sometimes. The more cautions Englishman or Scotchman escapes the blunders, but scores fewer hits, and does not so often marry an heiross, I believe.—Cassell's Magazine.

ANIMAL SENSIBILITY. That the love of approbation is common to meny animals we all know. Dogs and horses certainly can be influenced by praise and blame, as easily as men. Many years ago we had occasion to draw a load of gravel and we put Ruby into a tip-cart to do the work. He was profoundly depressed, and evidently felt it as a degradation. He hang his head and showed such marks of humiliation that we have never done it since. But on the other hand, when he goes. out, under the saddle, by the side of a young horse, this veteran animal tries as hard to appear young as any old bachelor of sixty years who is still ambitious of social triumplis. He dances along, and goes sideways, and has, all the airs and graces of a young colt. All this, too, is excessively human. At one time my dog was fond of going to the railway station to see the people, and I always ordered him to go bome, fearing he should be hurt by the cars. He easily understood that if he went there, it was contrary to my wishes. Nevertheless, he often went; and I do not know but this fondness for forbidden fruit was rather human too. So, whenever he was near the station, if he saw me coming he would look the other way, and pretend not to know me. If he met me anywhere else, he always bounded to meet me with great delight. But at the station it was quite different. He would pay no attention to my whistle, or my call. He even pretended to be another dog, and would look me right in the face, without apparently recognising me. He gave me the cut direct, in what was wrong, and did not like to be found | OENT. That animals have acute observation, memory. imagination, the sense of approbation, strong affections, and the power of reasoning, is therefore very evident. Lord Bacon also speaks of a dog's reverence for his master as tained by a man, who to him is instead of a without that confidence in a better nature something of a religious reverence—the germ
